

HEAT RECOVERY FROM THE EFFLUENT STREAM OF AN OXYGENATE-TO-OLEFIN PROCESS

ABSTRACT

The present invention comprises a process for cooling a reactor effluent stream from a methanol-to-olefins reactor. The process is efficient and recovers heat from the reactor effluent stream in one or more highly usable forms, preferably high pressure superheated steam.